

DECLARATION

June 19, 2003

To Whom It May Concern:

I, Sarah Waheed Saga, of American nationality, born to an American mother, declare that I resorted to the American Consulate General in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, under my own will, due to my disagreement with my husband and the impossibility of continuing my life with him. I am convinced that the best solution for the both of us is for me to leave to go back to my country, the United States of America. I also declare, with a sound mind and total conviction, that I am fully aware of, and understand all of the consequences of my actions, which includes not demanding custody of my Saudi national children named Ibrahim Adham Ibrahim Jad (son) and Haneen Adham Ibrahim Jad (daughter), whom I am leaving in the custody of their father Adham Ibrahim Jad. I also declare that I waive my right to demand custody of my children in the future.

I declare that I am leaving Saudi Arabia alone, without my Saudi national children named in this document. In the event that I would like to see my children, this matter would be left up to their father's discretion, and this would take place in Saudi Arabia.

I signed this declaration out of my own free will, without any coercion, nor under any kind of pressure from neither any source nor any person.

To the above mentioned declarations I sign this document.

Sincerely,

Sarah Waheed Saga
An American citizen
